

The Caucasus Institute is a policy think-tank based in Yerevan, Armenia. Its' goal is to promote inclusive policy-making in Armenia through conducting research, producing and advocating policy documents and encouraging a pluralistic and informed public policy debate. The members of the Institute strongly believe that a democratic future is one which is freely discussed and consciously chosen. Their goal is to support the societies of the South Caucasus develop a pluralistic discourse on key issues that concern their futures, be it local or general elections, educational, judiciary or language reform, healthcare or environmental issues, justice or law enforcement.